There are a few things to consider when making your desktop size selection. The size of your workspace will be your primary consideration, but also keep the following tips in mind:

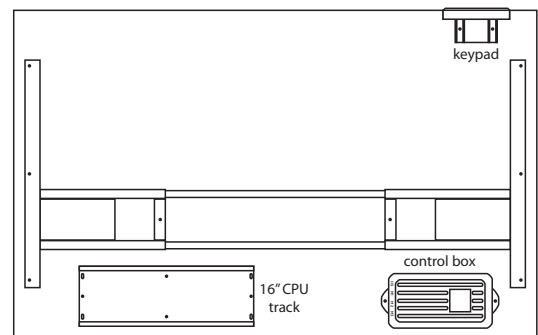

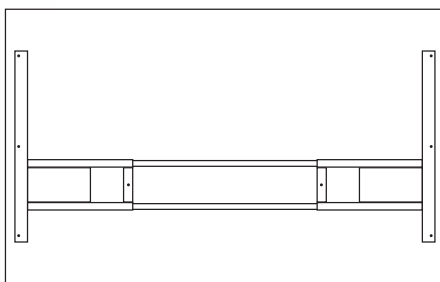

Adding a Treadmill
If you're adding a treadmill now or later, and want to put a chair and treadmill next to each other under the desk, you will need a top at least 72" wide. When it's time to go from sitting to walking, simply move your keyboard and monitor(s) to the treadmill side.
Installing a CPU Holder
There are mounting restrictions for the CPU holder when used with a desktop 36" or 48" wide. Instead of mounting the track on the outside of the legs, you will need to mount it along the back of the desk, parallel with the desk edge. The CPU holder mechanism swivels 360° so you will still have easy access to your tower.

Desk frames feature a telescoping crossbar that accommodates a variety of desktop sizes. If you change from a smaller to a larger top in the future, or vice versa, no problem. UPLIFT will stick with you for years to come!
