Adjusting the Foot Rest

Grasp the adjustment arms and rotate them forward. Each quarter-rotation locks the arms into one of the four height positions. The arms stay locked in each position until you turn them forward again. Because shoes vary in heel height, you might want to readjust the foot rest whenever you change your shoes or take them off.

Shift your feet to a different part of the curved surface. The surface won't move, but its curved shape will naturally force your feet into a different resting angle, improving circulation.

For a better day at work.™
